Rapid reviews of the literature: balancing rigour with realism

The presentation will explore the various challenges in conducting rapid reviews of the literature by drawing on recently published literature and the lessons learnt from two recent rapid reviews: firstly, of the nurse practitioner literature; secondly, of the literature on quality and safety indicators for end-of-life care. Consideration will also be given to the place of rapid reviews within the range of literature reviewing approaches that are available. The presentation will conclude with some practical suggestions for undertaking rapid reviews.
